I write in strong support of HB 536.
Oversight of the Chartered Public School program in New Hampshire has been negligible to the present. Millions of dollars of public funds (much of it extravagantly over budget) have been spent without oversight or reporting to the public on the program's expansion, expenditures and success.

The current, Chartered Public School Joint Legislative Oversight Committee has neglected its duty, rarely met and failed to report as required by law. We must establish a structure and list of duties and requirements of this committee that will result in an informed public and give public understanding of the New Hampshire Chartered Public School program, which - to this point in time - has operated in the shadows.

Kimberly Lavallee

I am opposed to this bill for several reasons. Public charter schools have a tremendous amount of oversight from the Office of Public Charters at the DOE. They also have annual reporting on their progress, annual financial audits and five year renewal hearings before the State Board of Education. Will public charter schools be involved in this process with input on suggested legislation and the potential impact it may have? We have already seen multiple bills submitted that were intended to help but would have negative consequences because of a lack of understanding of public charter school funding and RSA 194-B. I am also curious if the current committee has a calendar of scheduled meetings and can point out what the results were of changes to legislation and reduced paperwork.

Nicholas Zumbo

Is there a need to change the existing language? Has the existing committee met as scheduled over the years and had a positive impact on charter schools? I am not sure why this is necessary.

Has something happened to trigger the need for this committee to do additional work? Is there a need for more members to handle additional work? What purpose and impact will a larger committee have on the day to day operations of a public charter school? If an existing committee has not met regularly it seems unclear why more meetings with additional people are needed.

Stephen Lavallee

Opposed to growing a committee that already exists when charters have quite a bit of oversight compared to many public schools, including a five year renewal requirement.

It would be valuable for the General Assembly to have systematic, institutionalized oversight over charter schools.

Legislative Oversight

Current Statute 194-B:21 Oversight Committee Report

The original concept of the charter schools first originated in the 1970s by a Massachusetts educator by the name of Ray Budde. His idea was that groups of teachers could set up contracts or "charters" with their local school board to discover new approaches and ideas in the field of education. Charter schools were developed as a way to discover new approaches and ideas in the field of education.

Charter schools were enacted in law in NH in 1996. These schools were designed to be a type of hybrid between public and nonpublic schools. Charter schools have open enrolment, operate independent of any school board and are registered as nonprofits managed by a board of trustees. In NH they receive education funding from the State, use fund raising and gifts. They are exempt from state statutes and rules that apply to public schools, nonpublic schools, local school boards, or districts except where specifically stated in statute. Charter schools are required to only have at least 50% of their school teaching staff to be certified or have three years teaching experience. These are just some of the major differences.

As part of the original law in 1996, a joint legislative oversight committee was established and charged with an annual report and review a report from the State School Board on charter school approvals.

This committee met many times and delivered the annual reports until 2009 when the term expired. In 2007 a complete review was conducted of the NH charter school program. At that time the recommendations of that were review stated

"The state should invest urgently in the necessary administrative capacity to provide meaningful oversight of the charter school program and fulfill statutory requirements.
Curriculum, Instruction and Assessment
There should be a full curriculum study to determine the quality of the curricula in use in charter schools and their alignment with New Hampshire State Frameworks before re-authorization.
There should be a school-by-school review of the quality of classroom instruction and the assessments in use, both formative and summative. Further the study recommended "The implementation of a formal accountability process begun last year should be strengthened so as to develop clarity and consensus within and between schools regarding the nature of the required accountability plan. Measurable goals should be developed by the schools and demonstrated in their yearly report."

The oversight committee was reinstated in 2010. (Please note the committee report I have attached.) The oversight committee has not met for at last 6 years. It had not filed or issued a report as required in statute since 2011 and only 4 reports between 2013 and 2016. Charter schools are reviewed yearly for fire safety and audited financially. The full review of curriculum, staff etc. is on a 5-year cycle. These reviews, several in backlogs due to a lapse of a charter school coordinator position, are being handled through an outside vendor.

There are many reasons standing committee fail to meet. This bill offers changes to help facilitate a new committee composition that will involve the chairs from the House and Senate Education Committees or their designee. In addition, it adds a member from the Finance committee, appointments from the Senate President and Speaker of the House. It adds a non-voting representative from the Department of Education who specializes in charter schools. It allows for mileage.
The oversight committee remains charged to meet twice a year, receive a report from the state school board on the charter school program, and to deliver an annual report with possible recommendations for legislation. The committee will also be able to receive reports from the State Board as listed in 194-B:17,

VI The state board shall convene one or more working committees to study and make recommendations regarding the implementation and effectiveness of chartered public schools. The recommendations shall be provided to the legislative oversight committee. AS well as section VIII the state board shall annually report to the joint legislative oversight committee regarding approvals and denials for the preceding 12 months and reasons for approval or denial.

I urge you to support this change that will provide the spirit of the original development of the Charter School program and once again, provide legislative oversight from elected officials.
