4 389 Legislative Declaration of Authority Regarding Public Education. In its 1993 and 1997
5 decisions, in the so-called Claremont series of public school funding cases, the New Hampshire
6 Supreme Court ruled that the New Hampshire Constitution imposes upon the legislature 4
7 obligations with respect to public K-12 education: (1) define an adequate education; (2) determine its 8 cost; (3) fund it with constitutional taxes; and (4) ensure its delivery through accountability.
9 Although the legislature has from the beginning had grave reservations as to the court's authority to 10 impose these obligations upon a coordinate branch of government, in the spirit of comity it has over 11 the subsequent quarter-century devoted extensive time, energy and public tax dollars to satisfying 12 them. However, in the most recent of these cases, the judicial branch has asserted authority to 13 review and set aside the legislature's determinations with respect to its 4 supposed obligations, and 14 to fund education at levels determined by the court through a process which, though adjudicatory in 15 form, is legislative in substance. Accordingly, the legislature now deems it necessary to definitively 16 proclaim that, as the sole branch of government constitutionally competent to establish state policy 17 and to raise and appropriate public funds to carry out such policy, the legislature shall make the 18 final determination of what the state's educational policies shall be and of the funding needed to 19 carry out such policies.
