GOVERNOR'S VETO MESSAGE REGARDING HB 1244

By the authority vested in me, pursuant to part II, Article 44 of the New Hampshire Constitution, on June 13, 2014, I vetoed House Bill 1244, relative to the disclosure of the names of lottery winners.

In New Hampshire, we have a long history and tradition of open and transparent financial stewardship of our publicly funded, government-administered operations and funds. Since 1964, the first-in-the-nation New Hampshire Lottery has served our state and local communities well by providing players with a well-regulated and secure recreational gaming experience while providing more than $1 billion in revenues to public education. The Lottery owes much of its success to a reputation built on public confidence and trust, and that reputation has been well preserved by the Commission's current executive director and his staff.

HB 1244 seeks to prohibit the Lottery Commission from publicly disclosing the names of lottery winners in all instances, asserting a personal right of privacy as the primary justification.

While this consideration is a well-intentioned one, transparency in the administration and operation of our New Hampshire Lottery games and sweepstakes, and the Lottery Commission that oversees it, is paramount to ensuring continued trust and confidence in our Lottery and all of our public institutions.

Current law recognizes the privacy interest of those individuals who have had the good fortune of winning the New Hampshire Lottery by not requiring the Commission to disclose the names of winners proactively. However, if the names of lottery winners are entirely precluded from the light of public disclosure then accountability and oversight is ultimately diminished and the opportunity for potential corruption is born.

In New Hampshire, we value personal privacy, as well as integrity and trust in our public institutions, and both are critical to our democracy. Balancing these interests is something we strive to do on an ongoing basis and something that the current system for disclosure at the Lottery Commission does well. House Bill 1244 would change that balance to the detriment of the public's confidence in the Commission's integrity and transparency, and therefore I have vetoed HB 1244.

Respectfully submitted,
Margaret Wood Hassan

GOVERNOR'S VETO MESSAGE REGARDING HB 591

By the authority vested in me, pursuant to part II, Article 44 of the New Hampshire Constitution, on July 28th, 2014, I vetoed House Bill 591, relative to an abusive work environment and the health and safety of public employees.

In New Hampshire, our hard-working and skilled state employees consistently execute the responsibilities of state government with great competence and ability. They deserve our admiration and respect for their public service and should always be afforded, along with their private sector counterparts, the opportunity to work in a respectful and dignified environment.

HB 591, while well-intentioned, contains a number of poorly defined and unworkable provisions that will inevitably lead to a dramatic increase in unwarranted workplace-related litigation which, in turn, will materially disrupt workplace supervision and hinder productivity within state agencies. The bill also attempts to legislate politeness, manners and the interpersonal relationships of co-workers. Ultimately, it would head us in a direction toward extending these onerous and unnecessary directives to our private sector business community, making our state an undesirable destination for expansion and economic development.

The Attorney General, Commissioners and my office worked diligently with legislators and the State Employees Association and developed a reasonable compromise that would have served our employees well without greatly undermining the continuity and effectiveness of state government.

However, the Senate ultimately rejected the compromise and instead elected to send an extremely flawed bill to my desk.

Among its most onerous provisions, this legislation defines “abusive conduct” in a broad and unworkable manner based on an individual employee’s subjective perception, not on an unbiased objective standard. While I know it was not the intent of its sponsors, this bill, as written, may make the most routine workplace interactions – and the human give-and-take they entail – potential causes of action. Under this bill:

An individual may claim workplace abuse if an employee believes he or she has an “unreasonable” workload, even if it is a workload similar to their co-workers.

An individual may claim workplace abuse if his or her supervisor or co-worker uses language that “criticizes” the employee in public – even if the criticism is constructive, appropriate and done within the confines of the workplace.

An individual may claim workplace abuse if he or she feels his or her co-workers are not answering emails in a timely manner, and therefore “ignoring” a request for information or assistance. Given the workloads of employees, they are likely to have very different definitions of what amounts to a reasonable amount of time to respond to a non-urgent request.

An individual may claim workplace abuse if a supervisor gives what the employee feels is “unreasonable criticism” outside of the typical evaluation process. Under the proposed legislation if an employee, for example, fills out the same form wrong every day, or returns late from a break every day, a supervisor who offers corrective guidance outside an annual review could be accused of bullying.

An individual may claim workplace abuse if a co-worker or a supervisor shows “constant and harsh displays of disrespect,” even though the legislation offers no guidance of what it means by “constant” or “harsh” or “disrespect.” For example, under this legislation, an employee would be able to claim abuse if a co-worker regularly failed to say hello in the morning.

While many specious complaints would ultimately be dismissed by the courts, the state would still incur the time and expense of litigation. In addition, the specter of claims would create a culture of fear where supervisors are unable to manage, and a handful of employees could push their workloads onto their co-workers by filing bullying complaints.

This bill also creates an entirely new – and expensive – system for addressing public employee complaints, without any funding to establish it. Under existing state rules, personnel complaints are expected to be made first to a supervisor and then through the agency head.

In circumstances where employees are either uncomfortable making a complaint to their immediate supervisor or the complaint is about their immediate supervisor, existing rules also provide other avenues for redress for employees. In such cases, employees are also able to bring their complaints to other supervisors, their agency head, their human resources officers or the Division of Personnel.

This bill effectively nullifies those standard lines of mediating workplace disputes. In doing so, the legislation effectively ignores the fact that many instances of alleged “abusive conduct” under this legislation may not involve supervisors but instead involve co-workers. The bill would allow employees with complaints against a co-worker to circumvent the employee’s supervisor, who is often the very person best suited to address the concern.

Under the current system, the Division of Personnel, which has limited resources, conducts investigations into sexual harassment, and some other serious cases of workplace misconduct. The Department of Labor has no experience, no expertise and no personnel for mediating such inter-personnel disputes. This legislation does not provide the Department with any funding or staff to take on this major new role. And, even if it did, HB 591 is silent on what the remedies might be, and what authority the department has to enforce a remedy.

In proposing to enact this new set of policies, HB 591 ignores current remedies in place provided through existing personnel rules, existing administrative practices and the existing right to a private cause of action for those instances that are the most extreme in nature.

I have additionally heard numerous concerns from the business community, including the New Hampshire Business and Industry Association, which opposed the bill and are concerned about the impact of such provisions if extended to private sector employers statewide. In addition to the fact that this legislation will hurt state government's ability to effectively and efficiently manage its workforce, the possibility of its application to the private sector would be counter-productive to the efforts of our innovative businesses to grow and create good jobs.

I believe a respectful workplace is important to ensure productivity and fairness to all of our state employees. In response to the concerns I heard from employees soon after I took office, I tasked the Division of Personnel with developing a new "Respect in the Workplace" training initiative aimed at promoting a respectful and civil work environment for the benefit of all employees. Administered through the Division of Personnel in conjunction with the Employee Assistance Program, the "Respect in the Workplace" initiative provides training for both employees and supervisors to ensure that we are providing a high-quality work environment.

Every state employee should work in a safe and respectful environment and I remain willing to work with our employees to move forward to build on and improve on these efforts.

This legislation, however, does not accomplish that goal. It would create an expensive and likely litigious system; would incite conflicts between co-workers; and would make it difficult for supervisors to reasonably and fairly manage employees, making state government less efficient and effective. This legislation is not funded, nor are the necessary positions authorized, to perform such significant new tasks. In addition, there are reasonable – and I believe better – approaches to addressing this issue, which I remain open to working with employees to accomplish. Therefore I have vetoed HB 591.

Respectfully submitted,
Margaret Wood Hassan

GOVERNOR'S VETO MESSAGE OF HB 685

By the authority vested in me, pursuant to part II, Article 44 of the New Hampshire Constitution, on July 28, 2014, I vetoed House Bill 685, an act related to state agency communications, because it could place the state in significant financial and legal jeopardy while violating the constitutional separation of powers.

I have great respect and appreciation for the legislative audit process, the auditors at the Office of the Legislative Budget Assistant, and the value that thorough audits provide to taxpayers, executive department agencies, and policy makers. That is why I issued Executive Order 2014-3, directing state agencies to develop formal and public plans to address audit recommendations, and to update the public on their progress twice a year.

But the changes in House Bill 685 pose serious risks that could drive up the costs of state government by undermining the state's ability to attract competitive bids for goods and services and the state's position in pending or threatened litigation; undermine the constitutional separation of powers by making it nearly impossible for agency heads to receive thoughtful, privileged legal advice; and permit future legislatures, if they choose, to politicize the audit process.

Today, state agencies and the Legislative Audit Division have a constructive working relationship. But, from time-to-time, the Audit Division asks for access to documents that executive branch agencies consider confidential or privileged under the state's existing right-to-know laws.

Under current law, those confidentiality disputes are adjudicated by the Attorney General's office. This legislation would shift settlement of those disputes to the legislative Fiscal Committee. The legislative Fiscal Committee is required to meet in public, and thus the mere act of the Fiscal Committee "deciding" whether documents should be made available to the Audit Division would likely result in the documents being made public.

For example, bidders often provide confidential and proprietary information about their systems, their methods and even their technology when responding to state bid requests. They do so with the understanding, based on existing New Hampshire laws, that this information will not be made available to their competitors. Under this legislation, those documents could be made public through the Fiscal Committee and Audit process. That would seriously undermine the state's ability to attract competitive bids for goods and services.

Agencies often have to wrestle with difficult decisions, including on how to best implement laws that are likely to face legal challenges. Agencies seek out privileged legal advice so all options available can be fully vetted and assessed. This legislation violates the fundamental separation of powers between the executive and legislative branches by making it impossible for executive branch officials to receive confidential and privileged legal guidance. It also places the state in serious legal, and thus financial, jeopardy.

Despite the legislative attempt to do otherwise in this bill, it is well-settled law that attorney-client communications once shared with a third party lose their privileged status. That means legal opinions shared with the Fiscal Committee will become available to opposing counsel in pending or threatened litigation. This will have a chilling effect on the ability of state agencies to have a full and open dialogue with their legal counsel and in turn undermine the quality of the advice received. The right of agencies to engage in privileged communications with their legal counsel is the best way to protect taxpayers from legal risks and to ensure that agencies implement legislative intent. The release of such documents could result in costly legal battles and decisions.

Finally, this legislation risks politicizing what has long been respected as a nonpartisan process. The Audit Division has broad powers to audit not just state agencies, but contractors. Those audits are frequently selected by legislative committees. Losing bidders frequently try to gain access to the confidential business information of their competitors; information that is not available under the state's right-to-know law. Under this law, influential businesses, or legislators, could push for legislative audits of certain contractors, gaining access to information that has been denied by the courts and the legislature.

Our constitution establishes a mechanism for settling disputes between the legislative and executive branches – judicial resolution. I would be open to legislation that would allow a judicial magistrate to examine documents to ensure that they are being provided where appropriate pursuant to state law.

This legislation risks politicizing the audit process, violates the separation of powers, and presents significant legal and financial risks to the state. Therefore I have vetoed House Bill 685.

Margaret Wood Hassan

More than 150 prints from the Hillsborough Historical Society's Manahan-Phelps-McCulloch Photographic Collection will be on exhibit at the N.H. State Library in Concord from September 2nd through October 31st. The full Manahan collection contains more than 150,000 negatives from a photo studio that operated in Hillsborough, N.H., from the 1860s until 2002. William H.
