HOUSE JOURNAL No. 3

Thursday, January 5, 2017

The House assembled at 11:00 a.m., the hour to which it stood adjourned, and was called to order by the Speaker.

Acting Governor, Chuck Morse, joined the Speaker on the rostrum for the day's opening ceremonies.

Prayer was offered by House Chaplain, Reverend Kate Atkinson, Rector of St. Paul's Church in Concord.

O God of many names and one light, this is a day of light and lightness. This is a day when the bright spark of possibility illuminates our minds; and this is a day when we can put aside the burdens of daily life, and revel in the lightness of spirit that comes when we begin a new chapter. We give You thanks for our soon-to-be Governor Sununu, for the hard work, the passion and the dedication that have brought him to this day. We thank You for the many ways You have gifted and inspired him, and we thank You for the love and support of Valerie and their children as they accompany him on this journey. God of community, You inspire and teach us to work together for good. We celebrate the many colleagues and friends who have encouraged our new Governor to follow this path, and who will continue to advise, assist, and sustain him in his important work. May his position never become lonely or isolated; may he always be attuned to the needs of the people of New Hampshire - especially those who struggle to make their voices heard, and may his decisions have a good and lasting impact. Bless our Governor with strength, health, patience, courage, and energy. Inspire him with wise thoughts and creative ideas, and give him time to rest and play. Bless us all as we enter this new chapter with him; keep us enlightened, lighthearted, and full of hope. Amen.

INVOCATION

Offered by Pastor Thomas Peetz of Word of Life Christian Fellowship in Concord.

Good Morning. This is the invocation. What is the invocation? It is to invoke, to call on, in supplication, to implore, the act of calling for the assistance and the presence of Almighty God, employing his favor on this man and this administration. It is a special time. In 1 Timothy 2:1-4, we find in the writings of Saint Paul,

"I exalt, therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercession and giving of thanks be made for all men – for kings and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceful life in our godliness and honesty for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our savior, who will have all men to be saved and come unto the knowledge of the truth." Ladies and gentlemen, and those watching by television, and all that are under the sound of my voice, if we can come together on this historic day to invoke the favor of the Almighty God on this man, Christopher Sununu and his administration. Let us reverently direct our hearts together towards heaven as we pray and let's believe God together for a great time for this nation and this state. Heavenly Father we beseech You this day by the mercies and the grace of our Lord and savior, Jesus Christ. We ask for your wisdom for Your servant, Christopher Sununu, in establishing this government and in governing in the days ahead concerning New Hampshire and this great country. Father grant him favor in the eyes of all those that are put in his daily path and in the spirit of humility, he would inquire daily for Your guidance regarding the decisions and the relationships so needed in this hour. Strengthen him, Father, and his family, protecting them against every evil plot that would try to harm or distract him. Father, we thank You and thank You for Your presence today in this place, that Your presence would rest upon him giving him rest and refreshing him and instructing him and showing him things to come, imparting courage into his spirit to do what needs to be done at such a time as this. Unify us, O Lord, as only You can do. Not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans and together by Your grace we will make New Hampshire and America great again. In the precious name of Jesus we pray and everybody that believes that can say Amen.

READING

Cathy Merrill, the New England State Arm Wrestling Champion from Newport, recited a poem by Robert Frost.

The Road Not Taken

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
 And sorry I could not travel both
 And be one traveler, long I stood
 And looked down one as far as I could
 To where it bent in the undergrowth;
 Then took the other, as just as fair,
 And having perhaps the better claim,
 Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
 Though as for that the passing there
 Had worn them really about the same,
 And both that morning equally lay
 In leaves no step had trodden black.
 Oh, I kept the first for another day!
 Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
 I doubted if I should ever come back.
 I shall be telling this with a sigh
 Somewhere ages and ages hence:
 Two roads diverged in a wood, and I—
 I took the one less traveled by,
 And that has made all the difference.

MUSICAL INTERLUDE

INAUGURAL ADDRESSBy Governor Christopher T. Sununu

Thank you all very much. What a day. Mister Speaker, Mister President, Madame Chief Justice, Justices of the court, Honorable members of the House and Senate, fellow Executive Councilors, former Councilors, Senators, members of Congress, those serving in our armed forces, former Governors, I almost forgot, and most importantly, my fellow citizens of New Hampshire, thank you for this humbling honor to serve as your Governor and to lead the state forward. A very special thank you, if I may, to my family, my kids, my wife, Valerie, my muse, my everything. Thank you and a very special thank you to both my father and my mom, who are here, and my mom especially, who taught us what public service is all about. Finally, I do want to thank God. I often forget sometimes, Who has shown me a path to public service. I think sometimes we all forgot about Him sometimes, but He leads a lot of us here. Without a doubt, if you are sitting in this room, you are here because you love the state and you are here for public service and you are here for the right reasons, which is a really terrific thing. Today is not about me. Let's understand why we are here. It is about us, it is about the we, and how we as servants, as elected officials, how we are standing here and promising the people of New Hampshire to serve the constitution of New Hampshire, promising the people of the state to serve the constitution of the United States and put everything we have into it. It is the job we ask for, the job we have ahead of us, and if done well, we can really do great things for the state. We can't be divisive. I never want to start off on a negative note, but let's just cut right to it. We have a tendency in this body, in this state house to be divisive, to let politics come in the way, to worry about the next election cycle, right? The next election cycle is only two years away, but that is not what we are here to do. As an elected official, if any of us are here worrying about those next votes you are here for the wrong reasons, but that's why we have a volunteer legislature. That's why we put our time and our efforts, why we are so different than everybody else. I think we have to remind ourselves of that and in reminding ourselves of that, I think we remember what's going on the other side of the aisle, Republican, Democrat, we are all here for the right reasons. We all want the best thing for New Hampshire. If we keep that in mind, if we remember the great things we can do, that keeps us optimistic and positive, energetic. It allows more people to come to the table with better ideas. That is the philosophy we have to bring. It is not easy, given the election cycle we just went through; it was negative, and it was ugly. A lot of partisan attacks and personal attacks. That is yesterday. We are here about today and going forward and I believe if we put that together, we can do great things. So we have to ask ourselves, and we start off in the very beginning, what are the priorities? What are our goals? What is it that we are looking to actually achieve? You have to start with that foundation before you go running ahead. You have to know the path you're going to do down. We have to have broad perspective. Like we all know, the election is in two years, but we have to change the mindset in this state. We need long-term planning, long-term thinking. When we talk about business, what are we going to do for business not 2 or 4 years down the road, but 5, 10, 20? We have to think long-term when we are putting these things together so we can lay a foundation that will make sense, not for us...I don't know about you, but I don't think many of us are doing this for us; we are doing it for our kids. We are doing it for the future. We are doing it to lay groundwork so let's keep that in mind as we go forward and lay that foundation. As governor, you have my word I will be truthful. I will be honest. I will sometimes be very blunt. For those of you who have conversations, I don't think we have time for anything else. We will get right to the point. We will understand the common ground we can agree on and we understanding that we might not agree on certain things. We will take our time figuring those issues out. Can't get everything you want. Can't get everything done in a day, but over time, working together we can do great things. What are we looking at? Where do I see,...where do the people of the state see some of the issues we have to address? We talk about the economy. We have workforce issues. How do we maintain a stronger workforce, retain our young workforce, so we can bring in the new jobs and the new businesses and grow the economy? We know the story of our rising health care costs. They are rising at unsustainable rates. We know what has gone on with energy. Our energy costs are some of the highest in the country. We have to ask ourselves, what are we going to do to make a real difference for the actual ratepayers and stakeholders? We have a solid education system here, we really do. We've laid a great foundation in education, but I think we need to get not just innovative, but we need to start implementing those innovations we talk about all the time. Let's start implementing them and let's go into the communities, listening to the folks out there, finding out what their needs are and moving that forward. If you don't lay a solid groundwork in education, it is hard to expect anything else to fall into place. We got to focus on it. Overall on all of this, these issues we talk about, over all of this is the biggest issue we have and we know what it is. It is our substance abuse crisis. It infiltrates everything in our society, workforce, education, our daily lives. The costs of lives tearing families apart. We know the statistics. We know the data. We have studied it to death. It is real and this is, unfortunately, the type of crisis you don't need to study too hard for; you can see it. You can literally walk down the streets sometimes and see it, or bump into a neighbor and see how it made a difference in their lives or our lives directly. There is no one in the state that's been untouched by this. I believe we need to start in the beginning in terms of our schools. Aggressive prevention programs in our schools that start earlier, that are more aggressive, and I think we need to start bringing in the parents and the stakeholders into those programs. Let's teach the parents what are the warning signs, what is going on. We know this is not the drug crisis of the 1980's and 1990's. We know we have to be smarter about it. We know it is out there, but we have to educate ourselves and educate our parents. We have a lot of opportunity in the recovery programs. I think the state has made great leaps and bounds in the last two years in where we have gone on rehabilitation. So many folks need our help. So many folks need our resources. Whether it is more beds for women, we know we don't have enough beds for women. God bless it, just about a month ago we opened the first of its kind out on the seacoast, Hope for Haven Hill, a substance abuse treatment center for pregnant women. There are 8 beds over there. We need 80 more. We really do and I don't care what your form of rehabilitation is, whether it's public or private, faith-based groups, peer-to-peer counseling programs. There is a different path for everybody and we need to be open to all the paths. We cannot start excluding folks. We cannot start cutting people out of the mix. We need to put our resources behind our words and take some real action. Finally on this issue, let me address what I think is one of the most critical points. For all those out there who are putting themselves on the line day in and day out, their lives on the line, police officers, the men and women, firefighters, first responders that are truly out there, we need to make sure they know that no matter what, we have their back every time. Now, the responsibility of government does not stop just with those who can't protect themselves on the streets. We have to take it beyond that. We have a responsibility to protect the most vulnerable children in their homes, especially those within our protective services division. Our shortcomings in this area, and there are shortcomings and they are critical and, frankly, they are unacceptable. It's a failure of all of us and it's a failure of our system and I call on this legislature; call on you sitting here, to act without delay. Address the increasing caseloads of our social workers, correct the regulatory framework in our system and make sure these kids are safe. Those kids, as with all the children in New Hampshire, have to be assured the opportunity to education that will ensure a long-term path to success. We have to look at opportunity. That's a great word. It is a great word when we talk about anything we do, especially in education. Opportunity for parents to choose the school that their children might attend. Opportunity for teachers with greater flexibility in their classrooms, so they can devise those individual lesson plans for their kids. Opportunities for employees to engage with us and engage with schools, to create programs so our kids are coming out of high school or community college or even the four-year schools with certifications and workforce-ready skills on day one. I do want to take a moment to speak directly to the parents, the parents of this great state. To those in our communities and those where education is such a foundation in homes. There is nothing we will do or should be doing without engaging the communities, engaging the parents, engaging the teachers, being listeners. Sometimes we think we have all the ideas up here in Concord. We've got to get out there and talk to folks and find out what they are looking to do. I don't care where your kid wants to go to school, public, private, charter, homeschool, whatever, it doesn't matter. You the parent have the ultimate say of where your child will go to school regardless of income. As we lay that foundation of quality education, I go back to making sure that our graduates have the ability to swiftly enter the workforce with high-quality jobs and opportunities. You've heard me talk about my commitment to visit 100 companies in 100 days out of state to try to entice them in. You will not get all 100 but we are going to try. You can't catch any fish if you don't go fishing. I've already met with companies from Canada to China, from Massachusetts to Vermont. We have already sat down and started discussing our issues. We have to continue reducing business taxes. We have to pass a fiscally responsible budget with no sales or income tax. We are going to break down those burdensome regulations and there is a lot of regulations in this state. For such a small state, it is unbelievable. We are going to break those regulations down and open opportunity for business and housing and growth, because that drives the economy. Here is where I don't mean to spring it, I think I have talked about it before, but later today, I will put a note out and I'm calling on our commissioners, our executive branch. They're great people in the executive branch. Let's take a little pause. I'm asking them for 90-day moratorium on all rules and regulations. Let's take a step back and find out what we are doing and why we are doing it. Thank you. We know we have to reduce. We know we have to reduce our student debt, provide more opportunity for kids to take that next step in their education. We have to reduce health care costs by increasing competition on the insurance side and providing low-cost alternatives for individuals, independent groups or otherwise. There are lots of options out there. There are lots of ways we can do this. We are going to give employees once and for all the flexibility they deserve in the workforce by passing right to work. Let's tell these companies New Hampshire is open for business. Finally, we have to strengthen our economy by bringing sensible long-term planning to our energy policy. I believe for too long, with all our best intentions, we have disregarded our responsibility on lowering energy costs for the individuals, for the businesses. We know it. We have seen manufacturers leaving the state, in part because of the high-energy costs, because in part, the high cost of doing business. I'm asking to put everything on the table. Do we need more natural gas in New England? Sure we do, we know that, but are we going to do it sensibly, the New Hampshire way? We are not going to let companies come in here and just drop their plans on us any old way. We have to be at the table. We can't be passive anymore. We have to find the right solutions to get it done and get it done our way. Do we need to look at Northern Pass? You bet we do. 1100 megawatts of clean, renewable energy? How do we say no to that when we have the highest energy rates in the country? We can help ratepayers. And of course, we have to look at our renewable energy portfolio. I think with renewable energy, as many of you know, I am an environmental engineer and I've worked on these projects for a large part of my career, I think we have an incredible opportunity here just to be smarter, to be better, to be the shining example of developing a renewable energy portfolio that looks at wind and biomass and solar, hydro, geothermal, whatever it is. You have to design a portfolio and a system that is meant for us. Every state is different. Should we have the same solar standards as Arizona? Maybe not. Maybe not. We have to understand that balance. I think over the past 20, 30 years, the environmental movement has done a world of good, brought real data to the table, so that we can be smarter and don't have to throw spaghetti at the wall anymore. When we are making the choices on our renewable energy portfolio, we are looking at the economic and the environmental impacts. We are not just signing off on everything that comes to our desk. Sometimes if we say no to a project, it isn't to throw the project out. It's to take that money and reinvest it in projects that make sense for us. We can do it. With the brainpower in this room, I know we can. It's absolutely imperative, and if we get together, energy rates unfortunately are not going to drop tomorrow, but we have to lay that foundation for 5, 10, 20 years down the road, again, to show the individuals of the state, the families of the state, the businesses of the state, that we are getting the job done. Thank you. So, given these priorities, understanding these priorities, we talk about jobs, we talk about the workforce, we talk about the substance abuse crisis, we talk about the environment, we talk about our kids. When you keep all of that in mind, there are two words. If there is anything you take out of this speech, and trust me, I don't want to make it too long, but if there is anything you take out of it: customer service. Whatever we do, we have to understand it is about the individuals again, it is about the businesses. How are we interacting with them, how are we creating a system that they can interact with? We can have the best programs in the world up in Concord, but the individuals sitting in their homes trying to get someone on Medicaid, trying to help a loved one, trying to apply for a grant, trying to bid on a contract with the state. If they cannot integrate with us and know those opportunities, we're doing them a disservice. It is customer service for the individuals, what we do and how we do it. And if I may, on that note, let us think of an engineer. I'm an engineer. I'm always trying to reverse engineer things. We can have great systems here, but we have to think differently. If we start with the individual, if we start with the businesses, if we start with the schools, if we start with the kids in the classrooms. Don't try to fit them and their needs into the system we have created. Go outside the box. Sometimes you have to work a little harder, reengineer things. We need to re-create the system that meets their needs because their needs of today are not the same as their needs of 5 or 10 or 20 years ago. We have to get aggressive about it. It might take a little extra work. Again, we have the people to do it and we have to make that commitment to the people of New Hampshire that they will come first every time. New Hampshire is a great state. It is a great state, and I finish where I started. If you are sitting in this room, you love this state. We share those common values, those common goals. We have different ways of getting there. Let us not let the political attitude of yesterday overcome what we need to do tomorrow. We have to make that commitment. 1.3 million people out there are looking at this chamber right now and saying, are they going to do it differently, or is it going to be the same thing over and over again? Are they going to do it differently and be positive and be open and not just use bipartisanship as a tagline and on a twitter feed? We have to commit ourselves and put action behind those words, find our common ground, be energetic, be optimistic, be inclusive, go to the other edge that we are not used to maybe going. I am going to have my first meeting this afternoon and I'm going to make sure that first meeting brings in Democrat leadership as well as Republican leadership, too. You guys are invited, but it is important. It is not symbolic, it is real. I am going to sit down together and find out what we can do together, what we can accomplish, grab that low hanging fruit, understand where we may differ, and take the challenges of the state head on. If we don't, those are the folks we are letting down. We can be a shining example to the rest of the country, given our first in the nation primary, given our incredible volunteer legislature. That is a responsibility we cannot forgo. I cannot thank you enough for this incredible opportunity. Let's keep New Hampshire moving forward and let's do it together. Thank you guys so much.

BENEDICTION

Offered by Monsignor John P. Quinn from St. Elizabeth Seton in Bedford.

Let us now bow down our heads and place ourselves in the Lord's presence. All praise and glory are Yours, Lord our God, maker and ruler of the Universe. You are the author of freedom, the source of all power. We, Your people, thank You for the blessings of liberty. Help us to fulfill the civic responsibilities that accompany these blessings. For many, You've chosen a few to guide and serve Your people. We rejoice as we gather here today for the Inauguration of Governor Sununu. May the Governor and all of whom You've chosen to grant the authority to govern us work diligently and conscientiously for the cause of truth and justice, for the good of our state, our nation and our world. May Your grace strengthen them to work with order and patience, with thankfulness and joy. May all strive diligently to fulfill their tasks, that their accomplishments may benefit and serve the needs of all. Strengthen each of us with a willingness to risk for the sake of Your kingdom and help all of us to continually be concerned for the welfare of one another.
